

Welcome to the Sixth Annual Takoma Park Film Festival!

This year's festival programming showcases the local in relation to the national and the international, the "amateur" in relation to the "professional," and the didactic in relation to the aesthetic. Films and videos in six different languages produced in thirteen countries represent a diversity of experiences and points of view. The themes and strategies of the presented work speak to the ethical values of the Takoma Park community and nod to an intellectual and aesthetic curiosity. We hope you will enjoy this year's offerings and will continue to support this free, community media arts event.

Speaking Truth to Power (2007)
Melissa Mergner (Silver Spring MD)
10 min.
Documentary

A youth-produced short documentary about labor rights activist Baldemar Velasquez and the organization he founded in Ohio in the 1970s. He devoted his life to changing wages and working conditions for farm workers and his organization FLOC represented farm workers in labor actions against large corporations such as Campbells and Heinz.

Labor's Troubadour (2005)
Hope Moskowitz (Santa Monica CA)
37 min.
Documentary

A portrait of the legendary labor folk singer and social historian Joe Glazer--a 40 year resident of the Washington DC area who often performed in Takoma Park. The documentary is a celebration of Joe's life and his contribution to the American labor movement.
